Waterperry
House

Introduction

Waterperry House is Oxfordshire's best kept secret. A large country house, set in over 80 acres of its own grounds, surrounded by farmland and located 7 miles east of Oxford. It sits on the same site as Waterperry Gardens, a substantial and very well known Horticultural Centre, which is open to the public seven days a week.

The beautiful and very well-kept gardens cover some eight acres. There is an open air theatre available for use in the summer months.

The house itself is medieval in origin, with Jacobean and Georgian additions. The local Parish Church stands a few metres from the house.
